Norway Captures the Title

Norway 5; Mechanic Falls 0

Rain upset the championship title bout at Mechanic Falls, Saturday afternoon when Norway fought to retain a seat on the tip top held during the season. The game was called in the sixth inning with Norway at the bat. A heavy mist had enveloped the teams and some 3,000 fans since the third inning, but when the heavens really opened, Umpire Fogg called the game. Excited fans hollered for more baseball in spite of weather conditions that favored umbrellas and rubber boots rather than accurate ball tossing.
Norway sluggers took kindly to Althausen's fast ones. Brisk hitting started in the first frame, which netted three runs.
Another bunch of whangs in the third secored two runners. Four of the five runs were earned. Norway scored once in the sixth, but that didn't count.
Jack McCarthy had a splendid day in the box, and the mist seemed to have no bad effect on his stuff. Three scattered blows was his only offering allowed Mechanic Falls. He gave one pass and fanned six against five sent to the bench by Althausen.
That Norway was in the game for long distance broadcast was shown by two laggers from the bat of Shepard, Rowe, Palmer, and Allen, also the three sacker copped by Allen.

A reward is offered for information. Look up this ad for a description of the pup, then help a fellow out.

Mitchell's Flattering Report

WONDER WHAT IT COST?

"A recent rigid physical examination brought the verdict that, barring my face, I am about thirty years younger than the average man of my years, which will number sixty-seven on the fourteenth of next month. Just how accurate these physical tests are, I do not know, but it is to be supposed that the condition of the heart, lungs, kidneys and other "innards" do have, as with the motor of an automobile, something to do with the life of the machine."

Fall Wedding

Klain-Decoster

A very pretty wedding, the first of the fall events, occurred Thursday afternoon, September 1st, at two o'clock at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Frank F. DeCoster, 29 Highland Avenue, when their daughter, Adeline M. was united in marriage with David A. Klain. The hillside home provided an ideal setting for the event, with an archway at the edge of the lawn against the green trees beneath which the bridal couple stood. The arch was decorated with green moss and white flowers. The lawn was a bowery of blossoms as were the rooms throughout the house. Mrs. George F. Hill and Mrs. Arthur W. Easton, near neighbors arranged the decorations which were most attractive. Preceding the ceremony a beautiful solo was rendered by Mrs. Mollie Wren Whitman. The wedding march from Lohengrin was played by Miss Elizabeth Klain. The bride was given in marriage by her father. The Rev. Pliny A. Allen, pastor of the First Universalist church, officiated using the impressive double ring service.
The bride's gown was white georgette combined with Venetian lace, and was on the Period type. Her lace veil was caught becomingly and she carried a shower bouquet of white roses. Her maid of honor was a cousin, Miss Madeline Edwards of Farmington, who wore Coolidge Blue georgette with hat and her flowers were Ophelia roses. The flower girls, were two small cousins, Virginia Frost of Norway and Ernestine Ham of Auburn, in pink and yellow organdie and they scattered rose petals from the house to the arch.
The best man was Carroll R. DeCoster, brother of the bride. An informal reception followed. The same guests who were present at the wedding attended the reception, and they included the immediate families and many relatives. Dainty refreshments were served in charge of Miss Marian L. Downing, who was assisted by the young ladies in the bride's class at Sunday School—the Misses Mary Hill, Caroline Downing, Vera Merrill, Nellie and Cora Gurney, Arline Corbett and Virginia Allen. Miss Olive Stone was in charge of the guest book and Miss Doris Shepard presided in the gift room, where was a display of beautiful gifts, including silver, glass, china, linen, pictures, bedding, money, etc., in addition to the gifts presented at a shower two weeks ago.
During the reception, Miss Marion Haskell played several violin selections, and Miss Clara Adkns sang a solo. Miss Elizabeth Klain was accompanist. Among the guests from out of town were Miss Maude Trefethen, Portsmouth, N. H., Mr. and Mrs. Clinton Leslie and Miss Janet Leslie, Paterson, N. J., Miss Esther Klain, Fort Bragg, North Carolina, Miss Dora Klain, Boston; Mr. and Mrs. Eugene Flood, Farmington, Mrs. Gertrude Durkee, Jasper Everett, Miss Mary Stevens, Orono, Mr. and Mrs. Frank Webb, Frances Webb, Isaiah Webb, Bridgton, Mr. and Mrs. Guy Frost and daughter, Kathleen, Mr. and Mrs. Ernest Ham and daughter, Ernestine, Auburn; Mr. and Mrs. Daniel Durrell, Bethel, Mrs. Ruth Devine and daughter, Miss Louise, West Paris, Mr. and Mrs. Harold Files, Montreal, Mrs. Arthur Joselyn and daughter, Dorothy, West Medfod, Mass.; Miss Olive Purliston, Rochester, N. Y.
Mr. and Mrs. Klain left by automobile for a wedding trip amid a shower of congratulations and the usual emblems.
The bride is the daughter of Frank E. and A. Maude Decoster. She is a graduate of Norway high school, class of '18, and Boston University, '21. She is instructor of the Commercial Department at Norway high school and has previously held several clerical positions in town. She is a member of the First Universalist church, where she is organist, and is Superintendent of the Sunday school and an active worker in all departments of the church. She is a member of Mount Hope Rebekah Lodge, the Norway Woman's club, the Twin Town Nature club.
Mr. Klain is the youngest son of Mr. and Mrs. Morris Klain of Norway. He was born in Portland but the family came to Norway when he was a lad and he attended the Norway schools graduating from high school in '18. He attended Bryant & Stratton business college, Boston, graduating in '20. He is employed as bookkeeper for the Standard Oil Company in Boston. He is a member of Oxford Lodge of Masons; Oriental Commandery, Bridgton, and Kora Temple, and is also a member of William Henry Stone Post, American Legion. Both Mr. and Mrs. Klain are popular and prominent young people who are receiving congratulations from a host of friends.

Mr. and Mrs. Charles Rawding (Doris Kilgore) are soon to move from Lynn, Mass., to live with her mother, Mrs. Webster Kilgore at Norway Lake.

After pleading guilty each settled a fine of $10 and costs.

Obituary

Verne A. Ranger

Verne A. Ranger, a former resident of Norway, passed away in the town of Wales, Saturday, August 27, following a few days' illness of pneumonia. His age was 40 years.
He was the son of Charles T. and Lizzie Ranger and resided in Norway some years ago, where the family carried on a bakery and he drove the delivery wagon. After leaving there some three years ago for Wales, where he was located on a farm.
One sister, Mrs. Frank Richardson survives him, also his parents.
Funeral was held Monday forenoon at the home. Burial at South Harpswell.

ASTRONOMICAL LECTURE

The third and last astronomical lecture by Leon Campbell was given Friday evening, August 26, at the vestry of the Norway Congregational church. Mr. Campbell had a well selected set of photograpic slides of extended, planetary and spiral nebulae, star clusters, dark nebulae and other objects.
He also explained briefly, the method of obtaining extra galatic distances of objects by spectroscopic means, which parallatic measurement fails to do at such extreme spaces.
For the benefit of those who did not attend the second lecture of Aug. 19th Mr. Campbell hurriedly ran through the set of slides used that night. It was regretted that the 4" telescope could not be used because of the sky being screened by dark clouds.
Mr. Campbell having completed his vacation at the Lake-side cottage, left Monday morning, with his family, for his home in Cambridge, Mass.

Total 5,862 autos, 1,045 trucks, 82 H. V., 29 M. C.
The last item was Sunday which accounts for a large increase of pleasure cars and a big slump in trucks. In the third column, "H. V.", horse drawn vehicles are in the minority and not far ahead of motorcycles recorded in the fourth column.

The Daughters of Veterans resumed meetings last Friday evening with very good attendance for the first meeting after vacation. Plans were made to entertain Mary W. Cotton Tent, Friday evening, September 25. Committees will be appointed at the next meeting.

Heard and Seen at Advertiser Office

We have printed tickets for Charles Harrison to be used at a concert by the Stellar Male Quartet at Bristol Studio, Harrison, Friday evening, Sept. 2. The entertainment probably will close a season of activities provided by artists spending the summer in Harrison and vicinity. Some of the best metropolitan operatic and professional concert talent have contributed much to the coffers of the Bristol Studio Association and to societies or committees prominent in the welfare of the community. Best of all is offering to the people of this section standard music at a very low cost.
Richard Nieme, Harrison, R. F. D. 2, gave us a year's subscription to the Advertiser, Saturday. He said that some time off the list made him feel like getting the home news once more so has returned to the ranks.
The handbag found at the band concert Wednesday evening by Mrs. Decker of Brown Street and brought to his office, was claimed Saturday by Jessie Noyes, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Alton Noyes, Green Street. The young lady was delighted to receive her property and said nice things about the finder.
G. E. Crossland, of the Extension Service and Donald H. Ridley, Oxford County Agent, were callers, Friday. They dropped in to make our acquaintance and to blaze the trail for placing agricultural news of interest to our Oxford Co. farmers.
Mrs. J. W. Nash, proprietor of "Nash of Maine" taxidermist rooms, gave us an order for printed letter heads. "The place is just filled with fish. Thinking of getting a cart and peddle" she said. Summer guests have been successful with the fly and Mrs. Nash is preserving the trophies. The work has been delayed somewhat because of a shortage of forms used in mounting fish.
A chimney fire at Archie Frechette's place on Brown Street, Friday morning at 5:30 caused an alarm from box 46 on lower Main Street. The department lost time in finding the house for no person was at the box to direct the firemen. After considerable running around and asking questions, the fire was located. There was no damage to the buildings. Who ever pulls the lever at the box should remain until some of the department arrive, thus avoid unnecessary delay.
Ed. M. Rowe of Bryant's Pond, called in Saturday afternoon and returned the Horace Greely book we loaned him some weeks ago. He thanked us for the loan of the book and especially for the "Obituary" notice we put in the paper about him. "All it lacked," he laughingly said, "was the date." We told him he better not supply that yet awhile.
Joe Dubey: "That corn cure I told you about a few weeks ago is helping lots of people. They tell me about trying it and say the home remedy works." Joe's prescription is a simple one, anoint the offending spot with lemon juice. One lemon is said to do the trick.
W. A. Hersey of Waterford left an order, Saturday, to print premium cards for hall exhibits at the World's Fair. The officials offer three classes of rewards and expect all space filled. Last year the hall was crowded with vegetables, fruit, fancy articles, antiques, and novelties that received favorable press mention.
Edward J. Sharon, Lower Main St., has installed a new furnace, so is using our Intelligence Column to dispose of two stoves that he doesn't want to winter. His ad is in this paper and should be read.
Aaron Yeaton, director of athletics, in Milton High School, Milton, Mass., and infant son, made us a "door-yard" call, Wednesday. He and his family have been visiting his sisters, Mrs. Harry Spiller and Mrs. Roscoe S. Edwards, and Mrs. Walter Cullinan, returned home, Wednesday on account of his athletic duties. Mr. Yeaton spent his early years in Norway, was graduated from the high school. Since leaving college, he has been too busy for long stops here, but the memory of a good athlete and clean sport remains.
Rev. Lewis W. Witham, minister of the Calvary Community Church, at Harrison, and the Congregational Church at North Bridgton, has been a caller. We have printed the order of service for his ordination to be held at Harrison on the evening of Sept. 2, in which prominent ministers will have a part.
Arthur Higgins of the back shop crew has joined the spoon victuals squad along with Fred Sanborn, the fly-caster, and foreman E. C. Murch, both of whom are toothless. Arthur, known to us as "Muggins," had his diseased tonsils removed at the Central Maine General Hospital, Saturday. He came home Tuesday but has not returned to his work around the presses. The throat is tender, but quick recovery is expected.
Arthur Tucker is using the Intelligence Column for the sale of collie pups and young hounds. Mrs. Tucker wants to let Marigold Tea Room and a rent connected. Both ads are worth reading so turn right to that column before you do another thing.
Street corner and store front loafers are getting on people's nerves and our attention has been called to the subject. Objections to the practice are the stares and comments that greet pedestrians and that the "set pieces" are not good advertisements for a thrifty village or active business place. Witherell Park is pointed out as the most restful place in town.
Frank H. Beck is responsible for the large bouquet of gladiolas that occupies a conspicuous place in our office. The handsome blooms are choice cuttings from his gardens on Whitman Street and listed in his flower catalogue we printed for him some months ago. Mr. Beck is an expert who raises gladiolus and dahlias by the thousands and sells cut flowers and bulbs. This spring he set out 10,000 tubers and as the season has been ideal for their development his gardens are truly a bower of rich hues and beauty. He will have a large display in the hall during Oxford County fair where many customers can meet him and "talk shop" as in past years.
Charles F. Brown of Alhambria, Cal., made us a pleasant call Tuesday and renewed his subscription for another year. Mr. Brown is a native of Mason and went west twenty-five years ago. Mr. and Mrs. Brown started in an automobile in June over the route through British Columbia to Montreal and have been visiting in many places. They are with their daughter, Mrs. Elmer Stiles, at South Paris, but plan to start homeward next week and visit with a daughter in Kansas. Mr. Brown said, "Maine is ideal for summer, but give me California for winter."
Lloyd Watson of Oxford called, Tuesday, to talk over job printing and get our estimates. He is a jeweler and located in Oxford last June. He specializes in repairs on watches and clocks.
W. O. Frothingham, secretary of Oxford County Agricultural Society, calls our attention to the early date of closing the entries. The time is Sept. 6 at 6 p. m. and several days earlier than heretofore. There will be no dragging along up to fair dates of Sept. 13, 14, 15, for the rule will be strictly enforced.
Rev. A. C. Townsend of Waterford was in town Tuesday on business and dropped in to renew his subscription for another year.
Oliver J. Foss is fitting out an expedition to hunt gold in the town of Leeds. An island in Wayne Pond, otherwise known as Androscoggin Lake, yields black metallic sand that according to local geologists, is often associated with gold deposits. We have a sample of this sand at our office which Prospector Foss and Edson Waite of Leeds purloined from the beach and passed on for examination. The substance clings to a magnet, but its chemical properties are unknown to us. George "Shavey" Noyes, Ed. Cummings and others, say the stuff may be a guide board, pointing to a past or present deposit of yellow metal. It strongly resembles sand found when panning. Let's all join in the rush.
D. Cromett Clark, 47 Puritan Road, Winter Hill, Mass., writes: I'm thinking of coming to Maine, Sept. 12th and celebrating the 40th anniversary of my trying to set a line of type under the searching eye of Reuben Eastman. One minute I say I'll go and the next decide not to. I probably will not but I recall vividly to mind Mr. Sanborn's introduction to me that afternoon and afterwards his influence over me while I was shifting from country boyhood to the man that was to be.
Howard Lasselle informed us Wednesday of Peeping Toms, vegetable and flower garden thieves, and tramps who are carrying on business under the cover of darkness. "Will help anyone in need, but don't plan to put my time into a garden and have the produce sneaked away by lazy birds," is Howard's philosophy. He didn't comment on Peeping Toms, but hinted that a warm reception would be the official greeting extended.

Foreman E. C. Murch had visitors in the back shop, Wednesday. They were Mr. and Mrs. Orlando Kimball of Augusta. Mr. Kimball is foreman of the Journal job printing office. His wife was for years a linotype operator in the Kennebec Journal and Waterville Sentinel offices. Foreman Murch was fellow workman with them before he took up his labors in the Advertiser Office twenty odd years ago. With the party was Mrs. Kimball's mother, aged 81 years, now telephone operator in the exchange at Harmony.
Miss Mildred Seitz of New York and her sister, Mabel, called Thursday morning. They have been visiting in Portland and came to Norway to make brief calls on friends as they plan to be in New York, Friday night, Mabel, with her family, returns soon to China.
The street report that Norway had not received the $15.00 guarantee from the Mechanic Falls game, is nailed as untrue. Frank E. Decoster, treasurer of the association, has a check for that amount which was given to George Lord on the day of the game.
William Card tells one on himself. At the band concert, Wednesday evening, he sat on the fire escape at the high school building. The steps were lately painted a dark red, therefore the bosom of his Sunday best trousers carry an imprint not altogether lovely.

FREE WILL OFFERING AT BAND CONCERT

Gustav Heim, the trumpeter, and Miss Marion Haskell, violinist, with Harriet Morgan Bristol at the piano, were again headliners at the Norway-Paris Band concert, Wednesday evening. The soloists were loudly applauded by the large crowd around the band stand and listeners in automobiles parked over a wide area, gave expression by sounding their horns.
Marches and concert selections made up the band program that appealed to all tastes.
Quite unexpected and unannounced was the public appearance of L. M. Carroll of the Norway Shoe Company. Occupying the center of the stage, he expressed his appreciation of the concerts, and urged a generous response when hats were passed for a collection to assist the band. He also spoke highly of Mr. Heim's generosity, which made the weekly entertainments possible. The collection amounted to $48.00.
The new band stand, a gift of Mrs. Victorine Blanchard of Norway, has been a strong factor in the success of the concerts and greatly appreciated by the musicians, the citizens, and by the guests who have motored each week from surrounding towns.
It is understood the last concert has been given and the band will prepare for a three days engagement during Oxford County fair. Mr. Heim will be the conductor and solo trumpeter during the engagement.

This popular home for summer guests has been sold to E. W. Hutchins, who has managed it for several years past years. The transfer was made this week.
Along with it goes the Ordway Grove which has been owned by Don C. Seitz for a number of years.
There will probably be no change in the management of Cedar Brook Farm. It will be continued as a summer home for city people.

MY SUNFLOWER

As I have told you about my garden, so I will tell you about my wonderful sunflowers. One of them is ten feet high, a large bower at the top of stalk, which is a foot in diameter, from tip to tip. There are ten branches on it; there are also leaves sixteen inches from tip to tip, and one foot crossways. It looks like a tree. There are two of them. They are five inches around the stalk.

UP-TOWN HOWLS AND GROWLS

(From Laconia, N. H., Democrat)

When a musician asks $5.00 to play an instrument for 3 or 4 hours of an evening he is charging more than it is worth and it's as bad as highway robbery. $3.00 a night ought to satisfy the best of them for the time they play.

Those pesky bugs don't rest day or night whether it's rain or sunshine. They eat and eat and they grow up quick and it don't take them long to do a lot of damage. One has to attend to business and destroy them or lose their potato tops.

We never saw the time before when it was so hard to get help as it is at present. One can't hire for love nor money. Men rather stand round and hold up lamp posts on some street corner and let their wives work in the mill and support them than to work on a farm. That's the meanest kind of men and usually if one is found that will work what they do is only half done and even then they just work to get their money as easly as possible.

Mrs. Hall had to put on a man's apparel last week and attend to potato bugs.

It's next to impossible to hire help, lots of men out of work but they don't want to work or else are too lazy. The query is how do such people get their living.

One party took exceptions last week to my item about potato bugs being sent to the bug hell. Possibly they had some objections to having bugs as their associates in their future home but bugs are preferable to some people as associates.

HOW TO SOLVE A CROSS-WORD PUZZLE

When the correct letters are placed in the white spaces this puzzle will spell words both vertically and horizontally. The first letter in each word is indicated by a number, which refers to the definition listed below the puzzle. Thus No. 1 under the column headed "horizontal" defines a word which will fill the white spaces up to the first black square to the right, and a number under "vertical" defines a word which will fill the white squares to the next black one below. No letters go in the black spaces. All words used are dictionary words, except proper names. Abbreviations, slang, initials, technical terms and obsolete forms are indicated in the definitions.

We Must March

A Story Written by Earl L. Pierce

The little village of Benton lies amidst the sunbaked flat-topped buttes. The village consisted of a postoffice, a blacksmith shop and grocery store, where you could buy anything from a toothpick to a roll of roofing. A small church occupied a piece of land at one end of the street. The postoffice occupied one end of the Indian Agency's building. A dozen dwellings made up the rest of the village.

In a little village consisting of Indian lodges lived what was left of a powerful tribe of Indians of Arizona. The Indians were cared for by the Indian Agency of Benton.

In front of a lodge sat two red men. One old and wrinkled and bent with age. The other man was young and tall and straight, reaching six feet, six inches.

The old man was known as Bear Paws, the oldest chief of that tribe living. The other man was his son, White Bear, but known in college as John White.

The young man was reading from a paper that was a month old. The head lines of the paper in large letters bore the words, "Lusitania Sunk, American Lives Lost." And farther on telling how the ship was sunk.

"This is an outrage father. Just think of all those people being drowned. We ought to declare war on Germany." The old chief looked at his son a minute and said, "You have changed since you go to the white man's school. You no longer look like the boy who would ride with me in wild horse chase until sun went to bed behind the mountain.

"Many sleeps have you been going to the white man's college."

"Yes, father, three years have I gone to Yale," replied White Bear.

The scene changes. The little village is a bustle. A man dressed in khaki uniform of a United States Army officer was standing beside the sign that read, "Uncle Sam Wants You." Men were going in and out of the Indian Agency. One man said to another, "I joined, did you?" Cowboys, miners, sheepherders, gamblers were joining the ever swelling ranks of Uncle Sam's army.

Back at the Indian encampment, the young men were gathered around White Bear, who was telling them that an evil enemy was trying to conquer the world and make the people subject to their will. Shall we let the palefaces say that we no longer dare to fight? We are the only true Americans and we should fight for this land or this monster enemy will take our hunting grounds away from us." After White Bear was done talking, the young men of the tribe held a council to see who would go to fight this evil enemy in far away France. A young warrior sprang up and said, "We will take up the hatchet our father buried and help our paleface brothers fight. We too, will learn to shoot big guns and use what they call the airplane and tank."

Early the next morning sixty warriors were mounted on their rangy ponies. White Bear rode at their head. He was a perfect specimen of a Red Man of America. The men rode into Benton about noon and went to the recruiting officer. An Army Doctor examined them and ordered them quartered with the other men in the warehouse.

After a month of drilling they were sent to Flagstaff. There they received their uniforms and other equipmet. After their hair was cut and dressed in uniform a finer looking body could not be found. They stood straight and shoulders back, eyes to the front. White Bear was made Seargent and Running Fox and others were made Lieutenants.

One day before the regimet was ordered overseas, the Inspecting General ordered an inspection of the regiment. During inspection the General stopped in front of where White Bear's company stood and said, "I am glad to see our brothers, the Red Men standing beside my people willing to help preserve the glorious Stars and Stripes."

The General then spoke to the Indian flag bearer and said, "May you guide the flag you bear well and hold it on high in battle. The flag is yours to defend as well as mine." The Indian spoke to White Bear in his own language. White Bear, turning to the General said, "Eagle Eyes says, that he will defend the flag with his life; his fathers fought for this land before the white men came. The White Father at Washington and Indians fight no more and he uses the Indians like he does his pale face brother, very good."

White Bear paused and said, "It is better we should gather our young men, both red and white and forget our own troubles and fight for the land of our father, sir."

A month later found the regiment formed in line to march to the pier. The white men shoulder to shoulder with the Indians embarking on a transport boat for that far away France to make the word safe for democracy.

ANDOVER

Dr. H. E. Buffum Dead

Dr. Herbert E. Buffum, who spent nearly two months in Andover this summer, and who had vacationed here in previous years, died August 25 at his home, Perkins Street, Somerville, Mass.

He was born in January, 1872, at East Somerville, graduated from Harvard Medical School in 1897, was two years in Boston hospital and since then had been located in general medical practice in East Somerville.

He had been feeble, on account of a heart trouble, for a long time. He was stricken with acute illness on August 16, following a long automobile drive, and was taken home on August 20, in order to be under the oversight of eminent medical men of Boston, but no relief could be obtained. His wife and a daughter in her teens survive him.

HE THAT IS SLOW TO ANGER is better than the mighty; and he that ruleth his own spirit than he that taketh a city.—Proverbs 16:32.

The Restoration of Old New England

By Don C. Seitz

The motor car is restoring New England. This rock-bound region was dominated by tre rush to the prairies that followed the building of railroads and the throwing open of Government land. Soil seekers rushed away from the hills and chills, to the wide open spaces, leaving behind one of the most beautiful regions in the world, to become a land of abandoned farms and reforestling. The people concentrated in the factory towns were at first useless to the farms. Lower-priced foreign labor soon drove these out. The great growth of the West sent cheap cereals to market killing off such by-product industries as there were—notably the tanning of leather and the profits on raising sheep.

Thus agriculture languished. To own a farm was to assume a burden of taxation. Artemus Ward once expressed it pungently. A young man had been arrested for his buildhead. 'What have you observed in retaliation.' 'Why, less than a month his aunt died and left a farm in Oxford County, Maine.' 'Can your mind can picture no greater misfortune than this.'

The statement became almost literally true. 'Getting a living' was a matter of 'getting ahead' an exploit. The good farmers saved themselves with their crops. The motor ended this. For what it has taken away it is bringing back. It is pushing prosperity into the hills. The 'summer visitor' of yore has been succeeded by the motor excursionist, who leaves a layer of money behind. More than that, the motor has brought the farmer to market by connecting it up speedily with the city. Farmers are able to find employment in their spare time and spend more money in the villages. Work is done easier and more cheaply. The loneliness has been done away with. New England has been rediscovered. It is being restored. The motor has begun the building of good roads.

Once nearly all the highways were horrible. Farmers 'worked out' their road taxes in the most wasteful way. Instead of using up roads where rain and frost had done their best to harden the highway, and scraping topsoil from the roadside to create quagmires. Through the mess, spring and fall, they needed four horses, wasted time and were out of employment. This silly system has been superseded by state supervision, made by engineered engineers, with contractors who know their business. Concrete roads have taken the place of muddy highways. Easy and fast connection has enabled the people to a sense of their possibilities. Money is coming in, where before only it went mainly out, or was not in circulation at all.

The pretty villages are no longer dead. In what were once remote places, filling stations establish new centers of activity and spread the money around. And all prosperity is not in hard cash. Barter, keeping the cash current moving, the motor car does it. The visible is not the monopoly of motion.

In my old town of Norway, Maine, on 'Grange Day,' the street was not entirely barren of vehicles. Now the village has to employ a traffic cop and the streets are never without life. On a Saturday afternoon, not less than one hundred cars are parked along the curbs. Sometimes the number is nearly doubled. Merchants find that city folks' eyes on attractive window displays and come in to buy. Merchants have learned to 'keep open' for a half day trade and make money by it. Incidentally, the townspeople are better satisfied. When a connecting cement road was built to Lewiston and Portland the merchants thought all their trade would go away. It didn't. Instead, there was more.

The farmer has gained even more than the merchant. One chap who was living on a sandy plain found himself beside a trunk line of cement. He quickly filled his yard with beehives and now sells something like one thousand dollars worth of home-raised honey in the year to passers-by. The bees do the work, the fall he fills cars up with russet apples and golden pumpkins. People come for real pumpkin pie. The pie made from give them canned squash—a crime against the palate. What this man does, others are learning they also can do.

In one remote part of Connecticut along the upper reaches of the Housatonic, a state highway has created a new land of interest and industry. Old orchards are being trimmed, flower gardens established and hives set up. Moreover, in sunny nooks, where once nettles grew, green fields of tobacco stand steadily, bringing in a great return since it was found that Connecticut tobacco despised as a filler, has become the 'wrapper' for the more choice Havana staple. The change wrought is amazing since the engineers blasted their way through to the Berkshires three or four years ago.

Not only have farm and village awakened, but the states themselves have come to life. Maine maintains a busy publicity bureau. New Hampshire boasts its delectable mountains, and Vermont's legislature has unbuttoned what was always considered a pretty lean pocketbook. One will be surprised to find how much was created by living inside by the motor route. Now that I am going to build a trunk line on each side of the Green Mountains from the Massachusetts to the Connecticut line, an automobile syndicate has been formed to market picturesque spots to summer home seekers. It was who first heard of the state because of Calvin Coolidge.

Maine thinks it picks up $100,000,000 a year from motor travelers. New Hampshire comes in a close second. Now Vermont is claiming her share. The chamber has been almost magical. The conservatives who drove their young people away are amazed to find other people can succeed in their places and flourish. I attended a Kiwanis luncheon of Norway business men not long since. Of the seventy present, only one, the cashier of the National Bank, was a native! They were all prospering.

So New England has been rediscovered and is being restored.

Helen Caswell and Mrs. Bert M. Davis entertained the members of their class 1921 of Bridgton Academy at the home of Miss Caswell on Wednesday, Aug. 17th. A delightful day was enjoyed by the following: Miss Julia Morse of Waterford, teacher of science and mathematics at Canton High School, Miss Elizabeth Saunders of North Waterford, a teacher in New Jersey, Miss Florence Bennett of South Bridgton, a teacher at South Bridgton, Miss Olive Pingree of Bridgton, a teacher in Connecticut, Miss Gladys Moulton of Sweden, a teacher in Sweden, Miss Martha Caswell of Harrison, a teacher in Malden, Mass., Mrs. Arthur Trott, a teacher in Oxford. One visitor, Miss Eileen Clement of Winthrop, who is a house guest of Mrs. Caswell's was present. She is a teacher at Farmington Normal School. A picnic dinner was planned out of doors but as a shower came at the noon hour, refuge was taken at Mrs. Bert Davis' and a delicious dinner enjoyed in her sun porch. Every one enjoyed a good time and regrets were expressed that the other members could not be present. Some of the members were unable to stay all the afternoon but the seven remaining ones went to North Bridgton and called on Miss Merriman, who taught all four years that the class of '21 attended Bridgton Academy.

Mrs. Clinton J. Masseck of Brooklyn, N. Y., was a guest last week of Mr. and Mrs. M. H. Pitts on Hillside Avenue.

Mr. and Mrs. George A. Flint attended the Flint family reunion at West Buxton, Sunday. Mrs. Susie Flint of North Bridgton accompanied them, and a fine day was enjoyed at the home of Mr. and and Mrs. A. P. Flint of that town with about 75 guests. This is an unusual affair with the Flint descendants.

A family reunion was held at the home of Mr. and Mrs. John Witham recently. Nearly forty guests were present and a delightful day enjoyed. A picnic lunch was served and photos taken. One showing four generations was especially interesting. Among those present besides the host and hostess, Mr. and Mrs. John Witham were Mr. and Mrs. Curtis Witham and son Ray of Buxton, Mrs. Arthur Smith and daughter, Muriel, Mr. and Mrs. Norman Ward and two children, Mr. and Mrs. Kennard Smith and two sons, Mr. and Mrs. Lester William and 3 sons from Dixfield, Mr. and Mrs. Leroy Witham and two children from Standish, Mrs. Walter Dyer, six children, Mrs. Prentiss Fogg and family and Media Sanborn.

What Is Impossible?

Written by L. P. Evans, Editor of the Piscataquis Observer and published in that paper, July 28, 1927

If my memory serves me right and as A. Ward would say, "I think she do," Napoleon replied to an officer who declared that a certain undertaking was impossible: "Impossible is an adjective of fools." He might, however, have modified this statement after his disastrous march on Moscow, by admitting that a successful campaign in that country in the winter was impossible.

But it was not Napoleon that started the train of thought that will follow, but a few modern developments.

A copy of "The New York Directory" published March 17, 1849, contained the following which was taken from the "Pathfinder:"

"The plan for an Aerial Locomotive to carry passengers to California in from two to five days, according to the announcement of its projectors, Messrs. Porter & Robjohn (this last is quite an appropriate name, we think, for a person engaged in such a scheme) has been again brought befor the public by the appearance of large handbills in conspicuous places throughout the city, announcing that a large sized one will leave on the fifteenth of April for the gold regions, stopping on the way for companies of not less than twenty. The proprietors propose to take a limited number of passengers at $50 a head, including board, and require each person taking passage to pay an installment of $5 on the 5th, and an additional payment of $10 on the 10th of April, both of which sums will in case of the departure of the Aerostat be included in the passage money.

"When this design for an aerial locomotive was first exhibited to us, long before the unsuccessful experiment at the Tabernacle, we at once saw its resemblance to a similar abortion got up by an eccentric genius of Baltimore, many years since, who made himself the laughing stock of those acquainted with the facts of the case, by applying to Congress during the existence of the Florida war, for an appropriation to construct one sufficiently large to carry bomb shells in the air over the points where the Indians were supposed to be in ambush in Florida, and drop them around their hiding places. The plan met with little or no favor in Washington, and the unfortunate projector left that city with the belief that Congress was lacking in the two essential points of patriotism and desire to promote scientific improvements."

If the writer of that article were living now he would know that the inhabitants of Paris and London, not to mention numerous other points, did not look upon bombing as anything to laugh at during the World War.

He could also consider the fact that Capt. Chas. A. Lindbergh left New York City, May 20th, 1927, in an airplane and landed in Paris 33 1-2 hours later, the 1st non-stop air flight of that distance ever made. Also that Commander Richard E. Byrd and three companions made a similar flight.

Aerial navigation has not reached perfection but can no longer be called impossible.

Some who read this article may be able to recall Jules Verne's "Twenty Thousand Leagues Under the Sea," an interesting but seemingly impossible story of submarine navigation. Also another of his stories in which a company of explorers when among a savage people surrounded their camp with a wire, which when charged with electric current was very disconcerting to the savages who attempted to handle it. The World War made those stories reasonable by its submarines and entanglements.

Among the exhibits at the Chicago Exhibition in 1893, was a new substance called aluminum. I cannot recall the price that was put on it but it was so high that its general use would be considered impossible and yet aluminum ware is in the stock of five and ten cent stores and the metal is used in the manufacture of boats and bicycles, etc.

Thirty-two years ago an endurance test of automobiles was held in Chicago. The course was 53 1-2 miles and the winning car of the five that were entered covered the distance in 10 hrs. and 23 minutes, an average rate of 5 1-4 miles an hour. Still more remarkable is the fact that Henry Ford was very anxious to be present at the event but was unable to borrow enough money for the carfare from Detroit to Chicago.

After 32 years the starter in an automobile race must have a record of at least 100 miles an hour, and Henry Ford is reported to be the richest man on earth.

In an issue of The Observer of May, 1902, it was stated that Harry W. Thayer's store and residence had been connected by telephone. Today, if the mention of the installation was to be elaborated, it could be said that Mr. Thayer's residence had connected with the United States, for telephonic communication is almost unlimited. In fact an incident connected with Capt. Lindbergh's arrival in Paris and which was almost lost sight-of by his greater achievement, was his communicating with his mother in the United States by telephone, the first time a private telephone call had linked France with the United States.

Many other seeming impossibilities might be mentioned, wireless telephony, the radio, etc., but those mentioned will suffice. The New Testament tells us that "with God all things are possible" and it almost seems that man has acquired that divine attribute.

Since the foregoing was written I have read a description of George Stephenson's first locomotive. It was built to operate on a road of rails 15 miles long that had been built by some woolen manufacturers that needed a more direct outlet from their factory to tidewater. Their intention was to use horses for power but Stephenson proposed building a locomotive but his directors insisted that he provide stationary engines for use on the grades, so little confidence had they in his plan.

The trial was made on Sept. 27, 1825, and to the great astonishment of the crowd that had gathered, the locomotive drew the train of 38 carriages, the estimated load including freight and passengers making the enormous total of 80 tons, up the grade without the aid of the stationary engine.

When that train load is compared with those hauled over the Maine Central and Bangor and Aroostook roads today, for instance, it can be seen that another seeming impossibility has become possible.

HOW TO MAKE A LONG SPOUT OIL CAN

Take an ordinary oil can, fasten a cork over the end of the spout, not to obstruct the opening, then stick a wire of desired length into the cork, directly below the spout opening. The oil will flow along the wire to the farther end.

Get the Big Price for Your Hay

The quality of your hay determines the feeding value and the price. There is often a difference of from $4.00 to $10.00 per ton between choice hay and hay that grades No. 3. Increase your hay-land profits by air-curing your hay. Use a

John Deere Dain System Rake

Dain Features
Inclined frame—extra capacity.
Curved teeth, properly speeded—lift instead of dragging or kicking the hay.
Flexible frame and reel.
All adjustments made from the seat.
Exclusive tooth bar construction.
Either one or two caster wheels.

Air-cured hay is better hay. It holds its color. The leaves do not become brittle. There is little loss in handling. The hay keeps better in the mow, stack or bale, and is more palatable, more digestible and has greater feeding value. Whether you sell your hay or feed it, your profits are increased when you adopt the Dain system of making hay.

It does not cost you anything extra to air-cure hay. You merely use a Dain System Rake.

The Dain System Rake is the best for this purpose. It is the easiest to operate, and you can handle the heaviest hay because, with the inclined frame, the capacity is the greatest where the quantity of hay handled is largest. And, remember, the curved teeth of the rake lift the hay instead of kicking it.

Drop in and look over the Dain System Rakes we have in stock.

PLAYGROUND CLOSED WITH A FIELD DAY

The community playground at Norway High School closed Wednesday with a grand time in which some twenty children from South Paris participated as guests. One hundred and five youngsters romped and played games, ate a picnic dinner and made merry under the supervision of Miss Josephine Chase, play leader, and Miriam Fike, her assistant.

There was a volley ball game for boys and girls, bringing Norway and South Paris into close competition. There was tennis and other games for all and after dinner some real contests were staged.

A running race for girls from 5 to 9 years was won by Eleanor Aldrich. She received a beach ball.

The boys' rabbit race was won by Chas. Russell and he carried home a box of candy. This was for boys between the ages of 8 and 11.

A relay race for girls between 9 and 11 was captured by Frances Blaquiere. She won a large rubber ball.

Young Bob McCready won an Eversharp pencil in the dumb-bell race for boys from 11 to 14 years.

The apple and potato race was a scream and comprised girls from 11 to 14 years. Irene Tubbs won the fountain pen.

Junior Smith cleaned up as winner of the relay for boys and girls. A box of candy was the prize.

The candy hunt proved a long search for a box of chocolates concealed on the grounds. Everything was turned upside down and the place combed until Frances Blaquiere found the hiding place She certainly earned the reward.

This closes the first season for the community playground project, sponsored by the Norway Athletic Association and other liberal friends. It has been a success under Miss Chase and even greater things may be expected next season should the grounds be opened to the youngsters.

Verne Aldrich of Auburn was in town Monday, on business.

MARRIED SIXTY YEARS

Judge and Mrs. Charles F. Whitman of Norway observed their 60th wedding anniversary on Saturday. There was no celebration of the event for Judge Whitman is recovering from an operation for the removal of cataracts at the Eye and Ear Infirmary in Portland, and his wife who had been with him several days, passed the anniversary quietly at her home in Norway. Mr. and Mrs. Whitman received cards and letters of congratulation.

Judge Whitman was born in Buckfield, Feb. 6, 1843, the son of Joshua and Phoebe Foster Whitman, his grandfather being one of the early settlers of that town. He attended the schools of Buckfield and Hebron Academy. After graduating from Hebron, he studied law and settled here. Mr. Whitman was appointed judge of the Norway Municipal Court when first established here and the title "Judge" has been with him ever since. Later he was elected clerk of courts for Oxford County, holding the position for 20 years. He has always been a friend of the old soldier and has helped many veterans of the Civil War and their widows to secure pensions. In addition, he has been in demand as a Memorial Day orator. He is interested in historical subjects, is the author of the History of Norway, and has made many contributions to the Norway Advertiser, the old Oxford Register and Lewiston Journal. He maintains a law office but his practice is chiefly confined to pension matters and probate work.

Mrs. Whitman is the daughter of the late Ansel and Judith Morse Dinsmore, who came to Norway in 1839 and settled on Crockett's Ridge. She can trace her ancestry back to 1620 when the Pilgrims came to America. Her great great grandfather, John Dinsmore, so the story goes, ran away from his father's home in Scotland and settled in the north of Ireland. He married and had four sons. The oldest, John, came to America with the Pilgrims, was taken captive by the Indians, he escaped and settled in New Hampshire. He had a large family and one of the grandsons, David, purchased a farm in Auburn, N. H. David had two sons, James and Ansel. Both came to Maine, James settling in Minot and Ansel in Norway.

Mr. and Mrs. Whitman were married August 27, 1867, and have always resided here. They have two sons, Prof. Verne M. Whitman, headmaster of Laconia High School, Laconia, N. H., and Victor M. Whitman of this town, an employe of the Norway Shoe Company.

Norway Church Items

Congregational

The hours of services have been changed at the Congregational church. Beginning this Sunday, the church school will meet at 10 o'clock and will be followed by a worship service at 11 o'clock. This will be the permanent policy of the church unless developments make the arrangement impractical.

The purpose in making the change is to augment the importance of the church school. Youngsters will come to the school bright and alert ready for real work, it is thought. Many parents have objected to the noon-hour school in the past, and several have expressed their satisfaction at the new arrangement. The teachers and officers of the elementary department of the school voted unanimously their approval of the change.

At the worship service Sunday morning Miss Evelyn Saleeby and Miss Katherine Longley will report on the Young People's Conference for the Congregational young people of the state held recently at Lake Cobbosseecontee, Winthrop Center. The pastor, Raymond Morgan, will preach a Labor Day sermon. The vested choir will sing.

Sunday, September 11, has been designated as "Go-on-to-School Day." Young people going to college this Fall will take part in the morning service, and the pastor will speak on the theme: "Preparing to Live."

Met Forty Years Ago

Osman W. Brown of Lynn, Mass., Recalls Event by Local Item

D. Crommett Clark, in the Norway Advertiser, Aug. 19, 1927: "It will be forty years on September 12, since I left the farm in Buckfield and began as printer's devil in the Norway Advertiser office."

Sept. 12, 1887 was an important day in the history of Norway, and the lives of two men who worked in the Norway Advertiser office, and who since have continued in other lines of endeavor in the journalistic field. It was the day on which D. Crommett Clark made his first appearance in Norway, and also the day upon which I received my first introduction to a man who during the 40 years has been a steadfast friend, a glorious companion and a loyal coworker in newspaperdom.

I feel myself compelled to take notice of the few words quoted above as coming from Clark, because it recalled vividly the circumstances under which we received our introducton four decades ago. It was at the corner of Main and Cottage Streets, on the site now occupied by the handsome block owned by the Norway National Bank, and close by the cosy quarters of the Weary Club.

It was early on a Saturday evening, the ending of a day whose sunset was more glorious than an artist could paint, with a tinge in the sky as fair as a maiden's cheek, when Mr. Clark and Reuben K. Eastman, then an employee of the Advertiser office, approached a group where formal introductions were to be made to the newcomer to Norway and the Advertiser force. Several years ago, Mr. Clark told me that in that group to whom he was presented was Pert Nevers, Merl "Put" Richardson, Will Records, Will "Nixey" Drake, "Ducky" Drake, Fred Keith, Lee "Spot" Smith, George Devine, Bert Paul, whose father owned Beals Hotel, and a number of others.

The corner store at that time was occupied by M. M. Phinney, whose present whereabouts I do not know. Many of the boys were busy doing the "square jump" from a mark in front of "Hod" Cole's jewelry store to a given line opposite the Phinney store when Eastman and his guest arrived. I recall that I was watching the jumpers, hands in pocket, when I was introduced by Eastman to Clark in this fashion:

"Clark, this is Pomp Brown. His grandfather is Ephraim, who works in the office."

"How'do," said Clark and I in unison; that was all the conversation. It seemed as if it was all that was necessary for us to say, because our interest centered chiefly in the jumping contest. However, Reuben stood close by, his head tipped to one side and his perpetual smile spreading over his expansive face. He seemed well pleased with the social task he had in hand; he performed it well, for he wasted no time or words upon it. I wish he were alive today that I might extend to him personal thanks for that introduction.

Again, as I read the few lines from Clark, as published in the Advertiser of August 19, I wonder where the other boys of that group of 40 years ago can be at the present time. I know that some of them have reached the end of the trail; many others I have not heard from or seen in several years, and it has been some months since I "met up" with Clark.

But, on Sept. 12, 1927, I shall be in Norway, if present plans do not go astray, and I shall have as part of my visit to the old home town, a pause for a moment at Main and Cottage Streets and recall with a pleasure tinged with sadness the meeting of the trio—Eastman, Clark and Brown—on that spot forty years ago. My cup of pleasure would be filled to overflowing, no matter how large the cup, if each and every one of the young athletes met there in 1887 could gather for reunion in 1927.

But it can't be done.

MEL DUNHAM GUEST AT MEDA LODGE

Mellie Dunham was guest at Meda Lodge on Tuesday evening, August 16. Meda Lodge is owned by Dr. C. C. Godfrey of Bridgeport, and is occupied by his friends, Mr. and Mrs. Louis Gerard Pacent and family.

Mr. Pacent is a friend of Mr. Dunham's and invited him to spend the evening playing, singing, and testing the new Pacent Phonovox which is a device for electrically producing phonograph music. Besides Mr. Mellie Dunham and his son-in-law, Mr. Noble, a large number of people were present as follows: Mr. and Mrs. Louis Gerard Pacent, Louis G. Pacent, Jr., Homer Cosmos Pacent, Joseph Romanelli, Mr. and Mrs. Carl F. Goudy, Elizabeth Goudy, Barbara Goudy, Mr. and Mrs. Leon Campbell, Malcolm Campbell, Florence Campbell, Ruth Campbell, Eleanor Campbell, W. Waterfield, Mr. and Mrs. Charles Boober, Mr. Greenlaw, Mr. Jackson.

After popcorn and serving a buffet lunch, the guests departed after spending a pleasant evening.

American Generals

Before the Civil War

The seven ablest American generals who served before the Civil War were Washington, Winfield Scott, Nathaniel Greene, Anthony Wayne, Andrew Jackson, William Henry Harrison and Zachary Taylor. Four of these, Washington, Jackson, Harrison and Taylor were presidents of the United States. The military glory won by the last three was undoubtedly the cause of their being selected as presidential candidates. Scott was selected by his party to head the ticket in 1852 but was badly beaten by Franklin Pierce, a general in the Mexican War, who had won no fame as a military man but being a Northern man of Southern principles and therefore more acceptable to the Pro Slavery men of the South, like John C. Calhoun of South Carolina and Robert Toombs of Georgia, Gen. Than Scott of Virginia, who followed the leadership of Thurlow Weed of New York. Scott's reputation as a military leader rests on his campaign from Vera Cruz to Mexico City in the Mexican War of '46-7. He found a series of natural defences in his way but no men behind them of such pluck and staying qualities as his American soldiers. His victories, however, won him the fame of being the greatest general of his time.

He must have soured on the South for not supporting him in 1852 and caused him to stand firmer for his country and the North when Civil War came.

The fame of Gen. Taylor rests on his victory at Buena Vista over an overwhelming force of the "Greasers" during the Mexican War. His order to Brother Bragg, afterwards a general in the Confederate Army, will live in the annals of the country: "Give them a little more grape, Capt. Bragg." This was done as Bragg's guns double shotted produced great havoc among the enemy.

Gen. Harrison's fame is founded upon his battles against the Indians and British and Canadians in the West but particularly upon his victory over the Indians on the Tippecanoe in Indiana in 1811.

Andrew Jackson's military fame rests upon his great victory over the British at New Orleans, La., January 8, 1815. A treaty of peace had already been signed by the commissioners of the U. S. and Great Britain, but neither the British General nor Gen. Jackson had heard of it. There were no Atlantic cables, or radio stations in those days.

I hang out the Stars and Stripes on the 8th of January every year to honor the old hero. But not so much for this battle, but for his famous declaration, at an opportune time that will go ringing down through the ages: "The Federal Union. It must and shall be preserved." This was worth to the country, when war came, an army of 100,000 men. Andrew Jackson dead at the Hermitage in Nashville, Tenn., and Stephen A. Douglas dead at Washington, D. C., were really the leaders of the War Democrats but for whose support of their country when the Civil War came, the Union must have been dismembered.

During the last illness of Senator Douglas, his wife bent over him and asked him what message he had for his two sons. "Tell them," whispered the dying patriot, "to support their country."

We had in Maine a number of the followers of Jackson and Senator Douglas. Among them were Gen. Hiram G. Berry, killed at Chancellorville, Va. Col. Charles D. Jameson, who died from disease contracted in the swamps of the Chickahominy, Va., in 1862. Gen. Clark S. Edwards of Bethel, Maj. David R. Hastings of Fryeburg, Me., Gideon A. Hastings of Bethel and O'Niel W. Robinson of Waterford. All honor to the memory of the men who putting country above party fought valiantly upon fields of blood to preserve the Union.

Gen. Nathaniel Greene has been called by standard historians the ablest general of the Revolution, next to Washington.

Gen. Anthony Wayne's reputation as a military leader rests upon the storming of Stony Point on the Hudson River in the Revolution and his great victory over the Indians after the war.

The more Washington's campaigns are studied, the more remarkable they appear. The war of the Revolution lasted eight years. During that period, Washington won but four clean victories. These were driving the British out of Boston, his victores of Trenton and Princeton and his capture of the army of Gen. Cornwallis at Yorktown, Va. He had the smallest body of American soldiers under him of any American officer except Greene and Wayne, and these were largely undisciplined militia men. The Long Island campaign ending in the giving up of New York City to the enemy were faulty. Washington trusted too much to Gen. Putnam and Sullivan, and it was almost a miracle that he saved the army from destruction. Ever after he appears to have trusted no one in important moments but himself and no fatalities occured. It is wonderful that he kept his little army, half fed and clothed together.

Valley Forge ought to be reckoned as among his greatest achievements and it proved so as long as Washington was unconquered and his little army was kept together, though the enemy occupied the principal cities of the country, the cause was not lost.

Then, too, the French commanders were balky and it was often difficult to get them to cooperate with him.

At last his difficulties vanished. Cornwallis had come up from the Carolinas, and was at Yorktown.

LaFayette with French troops was in Virginia and would cooperate with him if he could get his army there in time. The French admiral, Count DeGrasse, with his fleet was in Chesapeake Bay and would defer his departure for the West Indies for a short time.

The Great Patriot and patriot leader saw that his opportunity had come. Stealing away from the watchful eyes of the British Commander at New York, he was well on his way with his little army for Virginia before it was discovered by that astute British general.

Washington's march to Virginia is considered by historians and military critics as a great feat. On arriving there he joined a junction with the troops of LaFayette and laid siege to Yorktown. Gen. Cornwallis hoped for reenforcements from Gen. Clinton but none came. Finally finding that his works were about to be assaulted and carried, on the 19th of October, 1781, he surrendered the place and his army to Washington. It virtually ended the war. When King George heard of the surrender, he exclaimed with anguish, "O, Lord, it is all over." And what a triumph it was for the Great American Patriot. It had been about five years from the capture of New York city by the enemy—all years of gloom and discouragement for him upon whose life and efforts rested the liberties of his country.

No words of mine are adequate to describe the glory attained by the Father of his country. It will shine brighter and brighter as time rolls on.

—C. F. Whitman.

Note—After an article on the Seven Greatest Generals of the Civil War, which I have promised an old and respected veteran to write, if my eye sight serves me, I will begin a series of sketches entitled "By Gone Days," which I hope to make interesting reading for many of the readers of the Advertiser.

Norway, Eighty-three Years Ago

Howard D. Smith has again called our attention to old Norway Advertisers published weekly in Norway Village by Ira Berry and F. Blake, Jr. Copies at hand are No.'s 33 and 39 of Vol. 1 of 1844.

The make-up is four pages of five columns printed on rag paper and now yellow with age. Three quarters of the reading matter is literary comprising fiction, poems, farming articles and biography. Home news is ignored and the historian after eighty-three years must scan the meagre advertising for local material.

From this source we locate E. C. Shackley at "his old stand" at the head of Main street. He carried on a typical corner store, selling everything from nails to medicines.

Simeon Walton was village watch maker and jeweler.

Robert Noyes advertised extensively for the times and told about books, stationery and fancy goods. He wanted to exchange some of this stock for clean white and brown rags or country produce. He also bound books.

Peter Frost's Fashionable Tailoring Establishment advertised gentlemen's dress coats, pantaloons and garments of every description. Business was good and he wanted seven or eight girls to learn the tailor's trade.

Hall & Dow at the "Old Yellow Store" carried a line of foreign and domestic dry goods, groceries, buffalo robes, iron, shovels, lime and plaster. Several tons of dried apples could be used and they paid top price for pork, pelts, furs and grass seed.

Anthony Bennett made a formal announcement of his new store, formerly conducted by W. E. Goodnow. Groceries, dry goods, hardware, etc., made up the stock. He paid cash for pelts, furs and country produce.

Among a few "foreign" advertisers were Francis Blake, Harrison village, general store with the motto, "Never Under Sold."

Simeon Hersey, Jr., Alvah Hersey and Warren Hersey notified the public that their copartnership at South Paris had been dissolved. The firm was known as S. & A. Hersey & Co.

Another partnership dissolved was that of Jones, Woodbury & Co. at Craigie's Mills, Oxford. Their business was manufacturing cloth dressing, etc. Name was changed to Woodbury, Stevens & Co.

A temperance mass meeting to be held at Paris Hill was to be addressed by Messrs. Dow and Walton of Portland.

The trustees of Oxford County Agricultural Society were requested to meet at G. G. Waterhouse's hotel in Paris to set time and place for the fall Cattle Show in 1845. Turner was the place in 1844.

Brighton market report quoted beef cattle at $5 first quality; seconds $4. One yoke of fine oxen $5.75. Sheep $1.33 to $2. Swine, lots to peddle, 3 cents for sows, four cents for barrows. Retail prices 3 to 5 cents per pound.

Of unusual interest is the report of James Hall, civil engineer, to the mayor and aldermen of Portland. Four columns of matter refer to a railroad route from Portland to Montreal. The survey's through Andover and lake region to Rumford, and one other from Sherbrooke, Can., by Dixfield Notch to Colebrook and Cannan received unfavorable comment. Other surveys followed the general line of the present Grand Trunk line to Bethel, thence up Bear River to the summit and down swift Cambridge stream to Lake Umbagog where it would intersect a western route in another survey. At the time of this report engineers had not explored any territory west of Bethel village.

These Advertisers were the property of Mr. Smith's father, the late Sebastian S. Smith, who was a subscriber.

Appeals of Oxford County Men Dismissed

The law court has handed down a rescript in the Oxford county case of State vs. Walter A. Lord and Frank Pike, dismissing the appeals of the respondents.

Lord, Pike and Irving Morey were tried on a charge of larceny. The verdict was not guilty as to Morey and guilty as to Lord and Pike. Appeals were taken from denial of motions in behalf of Lord and Pike, to set aside verdicts, and from denial of motion to grant these respondents new trials on the ground of newly discovered evidence.

"A conviction may be had on the uncorroborated evidence of an accomplice," says the rescript which was drawn by Associate Justice William R. Pattangill of Augusta.

"Such testimony shall be received with great caution and discrimination," continues the rescript.

"But the credibility of the witness is for the jury and they may convict on his testimony alone if it convinces beyond a reasonable doubt.

"If a person causes a crime to be committed through the instrumentality of an innocent agent, he is the principal of the crime, although not present at the time and place of the offense.

"Falsehood on the part of the respondents and their supporting witness may properly be regarded as strong evidence of guilt.

"Newly discovered evidence, clearly within the rule may not, and, in this case, does not, carry sufficient weight to warrant submission of the case to another jury.

"The real question raised by these appeals is, whether or not justice demands a different result, and, therefore, requires a new trial.

"The instant case does not present that situation. No innocent man has been wronged by the findings of the jury nor by the refusal of the presiding justice to grant the motions appealed from.

"Appeals dismissed."

ONE-EYED CARS

A writer in the Bath Times remarks that the one headlight cars are very prevalent on Maine highways this summer. Cars with a single headlight are met so frequently that the question arises if some of the offenders are not continual and are making no effort to abate the trouble.

Of course, accidents happen and cars often lose their lights through no fault of their drivers, but it is the duty of the drivers to have the trouble remedied at the nearest garage. We have understood that the state highway police have been ordered to pay special attention to eliminating so far as they can the menace of the cars with one light and perhaps they are doing this to the full extent of their ability. But the large number of cars that are met at night with but one light showing seems to demand a higher degree of enforcement in this connection.

Our Trip Down East

By Ralph W. Bacon

Maine is a wonderful state. Most of us who have never seen much of Maine believe this, judging from our own beautiful corner of it. One must see for themselves however to understand and appreciate the real Maine. It is then that we realize as never before that Maine is not only a beautiful country but that it is blessed with great natural resources. We realize that Maine is the great frontier state of the East and that its development is only just beginning.

It was this great desire to know our native state better that caused us to plan a trip down East. As we possessed neither airplane nor fliver, we were obliged to depend entirely upon the old fashioned methods of travel, train, steamboat, trolley and bus.

We boarded the 8:19 A. M. train at Bryant Pond, one fine Saturday morning, early in July. The first stage of our journey was to Danville Junction. We got a good view of the surrounding country from the hill near the station. Most people do not realize they are in the limits of Auburn at Danville Junction but such is the case. The town of Danville was annexed to Auburn in 1867.

Our train for Bangor arrived about 11:45 and we were soon on our way to the East country. Our train was a good one with limited stops. Lewiston-Auburn were soon left behind. Winthrop, with its beautiful lake and busy factories, Readfield, and Belgrade were passed. The scenery is beautiful all the way to Waterville. Almost before we realized we were there and speeding on the main line towards Bangor.

The journey from Waterville to Bangor is rather uninteresting. There seems to be plenty of good farm lands but the country is flat and the scenery in general, unattractive. Pittsfield and Newport are prosperous looking towns.

Northern Maine Junction is passed and we come out on the banks of the mighty Penobscot river into a most beautiful country and Bangor is in sight. Union Station, Bangor, All Change. All the hustle and bustle of a great metropolis as our train runs into the big modern terminal which would do credit to a much larger city.

I like Bangor. So does almost every one else that knows the city. You do not have to be in Bangor long before you begin to feel mighty proud of our beautiful Queen City of the East. Bangor folks love their city and are proud of it. They speak well of their city and take a just pride in its well kept streets and fine public buildings. They are friendly and hospitable to the stranger. There is an optimism and breadth of vision at Bangor that we wish other cities and towns of Maine, possessed in greater measure.

Bangor is a Yankee city. It is probably the biggest Yankee center in New England. In its telephone directory, Yankee names lead all others ten to one. It is a good business city. Next to Portland it is the greatest trade center in Maine. Here can be found some of the largest department stores north of Boston. One store alone has about 200 employees. The city has splendid hotels. It has a most excellent street car system with cars running regularly and often.

Sunday gave us a chance to see more of the city. The residential sections are beautiful. Fine old homes, well kept grounds and a friendly people always ready to help the stranger. A visit to the water tower and observatory was interesting. Here one can obtain a splendid view of the entire city. The tower is situated in one of the twelve beautiful parks in and about Bangor.

Surely no city in Maine unless it be Portland has a finer location. Beautiful farm lands surround Bangor in every direction. In the distance are the great forests of Maine with a background of lofty mountains. Stretching away to the south are the blue waters of the Penobscot river. Some day Bangor will become a large city. It is the direct business center for more than half of Maine. Its citizens have faith in their city and they are letting the world know about it. Bangor is at present spending more money for advertising than any other city in Maine.

Sunday afternoon we enjoyed a trolley trip to Orono and Old Town. It is a beautiful ride up along the banks of the Penobscot, past Veazie, Orono, and the University of Maine. Orono is an ideal location for our state university. It is only a short ride from Bangor yet it is very much in the country with beautiful views of river, farms and mountains in the distance. Old Town seems like a prosperous little city with beautiful residential streets. Time would not permit a visit to the Indian village as supper in the hotel at Bangor would not wait for us

Bangor has an imposing civic group of splendid public buildings including the Post-Office, public library, and high school. The Pierce Memorial to the lumber jacks is located here and is well worth a visit. It is a splendid work.

We were sorry to leave Bangor. It is a city that one can become very fond of in a short time. It is a beautiful, enterprising, clean city and one that all Maine can be proud to claim as our third largest city in the state. Yes, Bangor is all right and its Bangor house has a national) reputation for feeding the hungry until they are filled. We could have easily spent more time in Bangor but to keep our schedule, had to pack up and make ready to take the 6:15 train for Calais in the morning. (To be continued.)

Didn't Hatch

A school teacher relates that she was giving her small pupils a lesson on birds, and after telling about the hatching of the eggs, the care of the mother bird and the first lessons in flying, she said: "Now, children, I am the mother bird and you are the little birds nestled in your cozy nest. I want you all to spread your wings and fly away."

Each child, waving arms to the music she beat, skipped to the dressing room, with the exception of one little fellow who remained motionless in his seat. Turning to him, she said: "Donald, why didn't you fly away with all the other little birds?"

"'Cause," came the prompt and unexpected reply, "'Cause I was a bad egg."—Boston Transcript.

THE part played by the kidneys and their importance to bodily health should be clearly understood. Sluggish kidneys do not thoroughly cleanse the blood of poisonous wastes. WHEN BETTER AUTOMOBILES ARE BUILT . . . BUICK WILL BUILD THEM

Perfect Comfort - - for the woman driver

The steering column is adjustable to suit your convenience

Buick for 1928 is extremely thoughtful of feminine comfort. One indication of this consideration is Buick's new steering column, which may be adjusted to the most comfortable position for women, as well as men.

And in addition, Buick for 1928 has a new steering wheel—slender to fit feminine fingers—yet deep and solid to provide the firm grip men demand.

Buick for 1928 pleases women because it is easier to drive—because it is more comfortable to ride in—because it is the style-leader among motor cars. That's why you see so many Buicks at fashionable gatherings, and on the smartest boulevards.

Lesson for September 4

SOLOMON'S WISE CHOICE

LESSON TEXT—I Kings 3:4-15.
GOLDEN TEXT—Happy is the man who findeth wisdom and the man that getteth understanding.
PRIMARY TOPIC—Solomon's Wise Choice.
JUNIOR TOPIC—A Young Man's Wise Choice.
INTERMEDIATE AND SENIOR TOPIC—Choosing Things Worth While.
YOUNG PEOPLE AND ADULT TOPIC—The Best Things in Life.

Following the death of David, Solomon was anointed king (I Kings 1:5-40). David had failed to show the people who should be king after him (v. 20). Though an old man, he is stirred into action by the combined appeals of Bathsheba and Nathan. He immediately sent for the faithful three—Zadok, Nathan and Beniah, and commanded them to anoint Solomon king

I. God's Gracious Offer (vv. 4, 5).

Solomon made a lavish sacrifice to the Lord. The magnitude of the offering shows that he had strong impulses toward God and that he was unwilling to hold anything back from God. Following the sacrifice, the Lord made to him this gracious offer. This offer was not on the basis that the Lord cared for the number of animals, but the attitude of the man's heart toward him. "Ask what I shall give thee," placed very wide possibilities before the king. God, as it were, signed blank checks and turned them over to Solomon to fill in any amount that his heart desired. This was not a reckless act on the part of God, for He foreknew what was in Solomon's heart to ask. This offer to Solomon is no exceptional one, for opportunities equally limitless are placed before us. God is saying to every one of His children, "Ask and it shall be given you." The matter with its limitations is placed before us in John 15:7. "If ye abide in Me and My words abide in you, ye shall ask what ye will, and it shall be done unto you." These unlimited offers are open to those who abide in Christ and let His words abide in them.

II. Solomon's Wise Choice (vv. 6-9).

The Lord's gracious offer brought the king face to face with the responsibility of making a choice. There was no middle course open to him. God deals with all His children in such a way that a choice must be made by them. Solomon was keenly aware of the difficulty and responsibility of his position. David was a great king. For a young man to take up the work of an illustrious father and push it to completion is a most difficult task. Comparatively few ever succeed. Besides this, he had to deal with the disturbing elements which had been set in motion by the usurper, Adonijah. Being made to shoulder so great a responsibility so suddenly, brought him to keenly feel his insufficiency. In his reply to God he pleaded that his being king was not of his own choice but an act of God's loving kindness. He argued that, since God had made him king, He was bound to qualify him to fill the place. All who have been called of God to fill positions of honor and trust can surely exercise that same boldness of faith. When called to positions of honor and trust we should humbly present ourselves before God for help. To feel ourselves unworthy and unfit for great and responsible work and to cast ourselves upon God for help is not cowardice, but a good sign that we shall not fail at the critical moment. Solomon's object in asking for wisdom was not for display but for the good of others.

III. God's Unstinted Gift (vv. 10-15).

Solomon's speech pleased the Lord. God gave him more than he asked. Because he put wisdom first, God saw that he could be trusted with material good also. Christ saw the same thing when He said, "Seek ye first the kingdom of God, and His righteousness; and all these things shall be added unto you" (Matt. 6:33). He who puts God and spiritual things first in time and importance can be trusted with temporal things. That which God promised him above what he asked was riches, honor and length of days. All who feel the lack of wisdom can go to God with confidence (Jas. 1:5). God blessed Solomon with a singularly comprehensive mind (I Kings 4:29-34). He was a botanist, zoologist, architect, poet and moral philosopher.

Hiking In Maine

Joys Found in Long Tramps Away From the Automobile Routes are told by Boston Man Who Recently Crossed Oxford County

Another Article by "The Nomad" in the Boston Evening Transcript

There is no better region for a cross-country hike than Maine, for it is always possible there to choose roads which are not motor thoroughfares and which are, therefore, agreeable to walk upon. In the mountains of New Hampshire one may be forced to choose between mountain trails, difficult for all except strong walkers, and hard motor roads. "State roads" are out of the question for walking purposes. Not only are they flinty and wearsome to the feet, but on them the pedestrian is given no peace by the passing vehicles.

It is a misfortune to the hiker to be forced to take a State road even for a mile. This would not be the case, or not so much the case, if the powers that be were civilized enough to provide a foot-path along the side of the road. Why should there not be foot-paths? The answer undoubtedly is that either there are not supposed to be any pedestrians or else pedestrians are not entitled to the slightest consideration. Outside of towns and villages no human being is supposed to be on foot. The result, for the true hiker, is that automobile roads are avoided like serpents.

How to Find the Way with Maps

But in Maine, as well as in the greater part of Vermont, it is possible to find, especially in the midsummer season, smooth dirt roads going everywhere, easy and springy to the feet, and flower-bordered and frequently forest-shaded. Nothing could surpass the walkability of these subsidiary roads. They are the roads that are not marked in red on the map. The map is just as useful to you, the hiker, as it is to the motorist—only you turn it the other way around; what says "good" to him says "bad" to you.

You should carry one of these little paper road maps, and also the Government topographical survey maps, which can be folded flatly so that it will not take up too much room in your haversack. With the aid of the geological survey maps you can see all the features of the country before you get to them; you know when you have before you an ascent or a descent. Every farm house, school house or public cemetery is indicated, and you know exactly where you are without asking any questions. You know where there will be a little cascade not far from the road, and just what hill will afford you a fine view. The world you are passing through is yours before you get to it.

Traveling Light

Naturally, if you have had any experience as a hiker, you do not burden yourself much on the walk. Nevertheless you must, if you are a man and have any regard for your comfort, carry a suit of pajamas, an extra union undergarment and pair of woolen stockings, and the most limited toilet outfit possible. Carry extra safety razor blades to avoid stropping and use a shaving paste that requires no brush.

You will do well to wear corduroy clothes for protection against rain and take also a light sweater. Your haversack will weigh but a few pounds and will rest easily on its strap over your right shoulder. No stick, no book, no collars. A woolen shirt and shoes carefully chosen for ease to the feet—soft leather to the ankles and "crepe" rubber soles. A panama hat, brim turned down, is better than any cloth cap, for cloth wears you out by making the head hot, and affords no shade for the neck. If the panama gets wet in the rain it will get dry again. If it is ruined, it is in a good cause.

Equipped thus, you will have no trouble. The number of miles you walk a day will be governed by your own strength and inclination. If you are not out to make a record you will enjoy yourself the better. A loitering disposition is one of the best companions for a foot journey. You are not out to devour the earth under your feet; you are out to have a good time, and see all the trees and flowers, the nestling farmsteads, the brooks, and ponds and hills; to pause on bridge railings and gaze down into brown depths and yellow shallows. Some of the best things will be a little off the road; do not miss them.

Nevertheless, in tramping you do acquire a certain satisfaction in putting miles behind you. You are impatient to get started in the morning, and sometimes toward the end of the day, you acquire a sort of grim hunger to be still on and on. Don't let this feeling get too much the mastery of you. It will turn you into a mere record-maker. Keep on your soul the fine edge of your appreciation of every meadow specked with daisies and warmed with clover, every pinnacled pine, every lilp-painted pond.

The People Along the Way

In this mood all the people you meet will interest you—even those stern New England agricultural old hunkers who will not answer the cheery salutation of a corduroy-clad tramp, but gaze at you as "mia Carlotta" gazed at Guiseppe de Barber—"as if dere is no somebody dere" You will meet or pass two kinds of people on the Maine dirt road—city or ex-city people who will smile and country people who regard you with strong and cold suspicion. By these last your "good morning" will not be returned. But there are important rural exceptions. Take refuge on a porch from a shower, and break the ice of the rural wonder, and these people will warm towards you as if you were an angel of light sent to comfort them.

They are not cold at first because they are hostile, but because they cannot understand why you are there. Make them understand and their hearts generally open. You will not have to sleep out in the road or in barns. In Maine the villages are near enough together to supply you with an inn of some kind at the end of the day. You can safely pick out the best hotel in the place you have chosen for the night. You are saving your car-fare anyway, and you might as well have the best. You will not be turned away on account of your hiking garb, your limited luggage, or the dust on your garments. New England summer hotels are not so over-run with guests just now as to incline them against a tramper who looks as though he could pay his bill. And clean sheets, comfortable beds and nice baths are very cheering when you are on the road.

Scenic Beauties—Living Things

So from one day to another your zest increases on the road, and you are bound to be sorry when your destination is reached. You will have seen beauties and experienced pleasures that no other kind of travel can possibly give. You will have enjoyed intimacies with nature that are to be partaken of only on one's feet. You will have heard the wood-thrush sing in the depths of the forest. The fragrance of the twin-flower beds has been borne often and often to your nostrils. You have stopped to pluck a white rose and read a tender old inscription in the wayside burying-ground. You have looked far, far westward over the mountain-rimmed landscape.

You have seen the humblest people as they actually live. You have lived and breathed close to a lovely world, and if you have at times been weary, it has been with a sweet and soothing weariness.

A Word About Maine Lakes

From Another Article by The Nomad

Maine lakes have certain common characteristics—deeply wooded banks, hilly surroundings, clear water, reedy coves—so that you could say of such bodies of water anywhere that they are "like a Maine lake." But there are great differences between the individual lakes. Big Sebago, shaped exactly like a fat turnip, has comparatively low shores; it is a broad, fine piece of water, and that is about all one can say of it. But only a few miles away lies Long Lake, fifteen miles long, scarcely a mile wide at any point, almost as straight as a ramrod, with the hills looking down on it. All through the game region there are many of these same longitudinal lakes, occupying what seems once to have been rifts or cracks in the landscape and generally in connected chains.

Everyone of them has its especial beauty. There are reedy, lonely ponds where the loon laughs and lunges, and there are lakes wholly surrounded by sandy beaches.

In the Parker-Androscoggin chain (Franklin, Kennebec, and Androscoggin Counties), Pickerel Pond and Pocasset Lake are really one body of water, since they communicate at the same level. Pickerel discharges into Pocasset through a narrow channel, and they lie side by side with but a neck of woods between them, but they are as different as if one of them were in Switzerland and the other in Wisconsin.

High, deeply forested hills, and projecting pine and oak-clad promontories look down on Pickerel Pond. Wild conditions prevail here. The other night the Nomad listened for twenty minutes to a bob-cat screaming in the woods. But paddle your canoe through the narrow passage-way into Pocasset, and you find a different world. The shores are lower, and cleared farms creep down to the water. The white stones of a little cemetery crown the western slope and at the lower end of the lake nestles the village of Wayne, where the crutches are made.

Most of these lakes of western Maine are well supplied with fish. In any of them one may catch pickerel, white perch, bass or chub; in some, salmon; and no end of sun-fish. Many of them, of course, have lake trout or muscallonge. Success in fishing strangely fluctuates. The natives here, as everywhere, else where, are the most successful fishermen, for they know the haunts and the habits of the fish. But at times even the most accomplished fishermen sit in a boat for five or six hours at a time without getting a bite. At other times the natives return with beautiful big strings of pickerel and bass when the city swells got nothing.

There can be no question that the Maine lakes are very rich in fish. Some of them have been carefully and successfully restocked through the State hatcheries. But fish or no fish, the Maine lakes are an allurement to all nature lovers. Wonderful for canoeing, as they stretch their slim length through the valleys as clear as crystal, surrounded by a noble vegetation, they beckon irresistably to everyone who loves a mirroring sheet of sparkling water among the woods.

Maine is a Beautiful State

The Boston Herald says: "Verily Maine is a wonderful state. Its resources are beginning to be realized. It is more than a summer resort, delightfully as it serves that commendable purpose."

This statement concluded an editorial in the Boston new paper in which was discussed that section of Maine North and East of Bangor.

"It is a wonderful agricultural territory," the editorial states, "chiefly famed for its potatoes, but raising countless other crops." The writer goes on to tell about the magnificent distances in Maine. "How many people realize," the Herald says, "that Fort Kent, one of the towns on the northern border, is further from Bangor by regular state road, than Bangor is from Boston?"

Few people appreciate the size of Maine until they have undertaken to ride through it by automobile. Only a small portion of the great state is seen even then. Indeed a considerable portion of it is as yet not opened up to automobile tourists and it will probably be many years before it is.

Maine never fails to interest the people who visit it. It has resources which are as yet untouched. For several generations the eyes of the nation have been turned towards the West. New England capital has been pouring into western development in a never ending stream. Nearer at hand to investors lie Maine's remarkable opportunities. The time approaches when some of these will be recognized by those who seek safe and promising investments.

The people of Maine are just beginning to realize that it lies within themselves to turn the golden stream which will aid in the upbuilding of their state in this direction. Persistent and continuous publicity will do much to hasten the day when some of our many resources are developed. A liberal, far sighted policy on the part of our people will aid in making Maine all that it should be.

Fortunately the people of this state are beginning to appreciate these things. They are laying aside sectonal jealousies, and thinking in terms of general development. They are no longer being misled by designing and selfish politicians who have advocated policies which have placed handicaps in the way of progress. The spirit now is to remove the barriers which have so long prevented Maine from entering upon an industrial development which its great natural advantages invite. —Press Herald.

Committee Raising Money to Send Bates Debating Team on Trip to Promote Welfare of Maine

A state committee of twenty-five prominent citizens headed by Guy P. Gannett as State Chairman, publisher of the Portland Press Herald, Portland Evening Express and Sunday Telegram, and Treasurer of the New England Council, has started a movement to raise $7,000 to be expended in sending a debating team from Bates College on a tour around the world.

The purposes of the trip are first to promote international friendship and secondly to let the rest of the world know more intimate details about the State of Maine and what she has to offer along Agricultural, Industrial, and Recreational lines.

The team, not yet selected, will consist of four men who will act as ambassadors for the state. The committee plans to make a wide state canvass for funds which will make the trip possible and will endeavor to have as many individual donations as possible, however small, thereby making it a state wide affair.

If the funds are raised, and from early responses there seems but little doubt that they will be, it will be the first time in history that citizens of a state have selected one of its institutions of learning for such an ambitious undertaking.

Bates College was chosen from among the Maine Colleges due to her debating teams being already internationally known from teams sent to England and throughout the United States and Canada.

Dr. Clifton D. Gray, President of Bates College, estimated that from previous trips, $7,000 would cover the expenses of the trip.

The team will consist of three men and an alternate. Trials will be held at the college in the Fall to select the team and it is planned for them to start in April.

Their itinerary as now planned takes them first to San Francisco, thence to Honolulu, Manila, Australia, New Zealand, So. Africa, to the east coast of Africa, England throught the Suez canal, returning to Maine in October.

Debates will be arranged for them in the leading colleges and universities in the places visited and their itinerary is so planned that they will arrive at the various countries at the time that the universities are in session.

The impressive record of Bates debates count no fewer than 105 intercollegiate meetings of which they have won 82, 5 Canadian debates, 12 English debates, 1 Scottish and 1 Australian debate. The first international debate was held in 1908 between Bates and Queen's College, Kingston, Ontario.

Every class in the Sunday school is making some contribution to the morning, and we are hoping that the church will be packed with interested parents and friends. The honor students are to be given awards for their faithfulness. This is one Sunday when no parent should send their children—rather they should bring them. Parents come along too!
